

How much does a web site cost?

There are a few factors that you'll need to consider in determining the total cost of your web site. These factors include how many pages you are going to have, if you will sell products on your website, the graphic work involved, and how interactive your future web site will be. You will also need web hosting and domain name registration.

We like to use LunarPages because they offer tons of great features to the end-user (YOU), which includes a second domain name and life-long registration included with your hosting package.
